

FAST FOOD RIGHTS NOW!

Day of action: 15 February

The multi billion profits of the fast food industry are based on the super exploitation of tens of thousands of workers.

Low wages and zero hours contracts are the order of the day with unorganised, mainly young workers often at the mercy of employers.

This can't go on. The upsurge of strikes and protests by fast food workers in the States is an example of just what might be possible here.

Fast Food Rights aims at letting workers know their rights, taking on the multinationals that dominate the industry and opening the door to organise workers.

Workers have rights, but to get justice union organisation is key.

The campaign is calling for a day of action to raise the issue of justice for fast food workers on Saturday 15 February.

We want to take the message to the public and build union links with the workers who flip the burgers, deliver pizzas or pour the coffees.

Supported by BFAWU, Unite the Resistance and John McDonnell MP
