

Justice for fast food workers

Hungry for justice day of action: 15 February

The multi billion pound fast food industry bases its profits on exploitation and increasingly a culture of zero hours contracts.

Workers who make the huge profits for the fast food corporations are on low wages and are not told about their rights.

In the United States there's been a growing movement for justice for workers in the fast food industry. This included protests and strikes.

We need a movement here too. At the heart of any such campaign is the need to get organised.

Fast food workers need strong unions so they can fight together for decent pay, secure contracts and respect.

Contact us

- Let us know what life is like in your workplace, what pay and conditions you have to put up with, what contract you are on.
- Get involved. First organising meeting: Monday 24 February, 6pm at ULU, Malet St, London

15 February activities:

London: Meet 1pm at McDonald's on the corner of Oxford Street and Tottenham Court Road

Elsewhere: See our website

Supported by John McDonnell MP, BFAWU, Unite the Resistance, Disabled People Against Cuts, Youth Fight for Jobs, NSSN
Twitter: @fastfoodrights • Facebook page: Fast Foods Rights • Web: fastfoodrights.wordpress.com • Email: fastfoodrights@mail.com

Justice for fast food workers

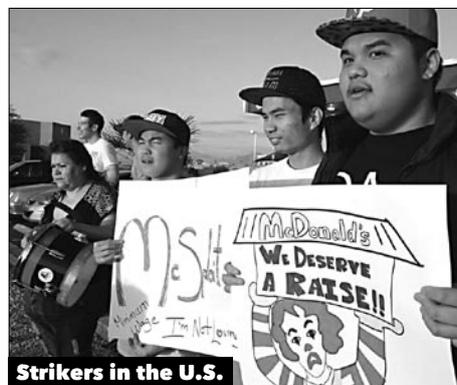

Hungry for justice day of action: 15 February

The multi billion pound fast food industry bases its profits on exploitation and increasingly a culture of zero hours contracts.

Workers who make the huge profits for the fast food corporations are on low wages and are not told about their rights.

In the United States there's been a growing movement for justice for workers in the fast food industry. This included protests and strikes.

We need a movement here too. At the heart of any such campaign is the need to get organised.

Fast food workers need strong unions so they can fight together for decent pay, secure contracts and respect.

Contact us

- Let us know what life is like in your workplace, what pay and conditions you have to put up with, what contract you are on.
- Get involved. First organising meeting: Monday 24 February, 6pm at ULU, Malet St, London

15 February activities:

London: Meet 1pm at McDonald's on the corner of Oxford Street and Tottenham Court Road

Elsewhere: See our website

Supported by John McDonnell MP, BFAWU, Unite the Resistance, Disabled People Against Cuts, Youth Fight for Jobs, NSSN
Twitter: @fastfoodrights • Facebook page: Fast Foods Rights • Web: fastfoodrights.wordpress.com • Email: fastfoodrights@mail.com