

McDonald's workers like you are on strike today

McDonald's workers like you are on strike today

McDonald's workers at stores in Crayford (SE London) and Cambridge are making history. They are the first ever UK McDonald's workers to go ON STRIKE.

They are standing up to bullying managers and campaigning for a £10 an hour, for guaranteed hours contracts and for union rights.

Many people think that McDonald's workers can't go on strike and can't join a union.

Not true, these workers are working together for better pay, better conditions and respect at work.

These McDonalds workers are all over the news. The public is supporting them. Support has come from all over the country and around the world. McDonald's responded by saying they'll offer guaranteed hours to every worker by the end of 2017.

This would not have happened without McDonald's workers joining the Bakers' Food & Allied Workers' Union (BFAWU), and voting for the strike. By joining the union and the campaign, McDonald's workers can win £10 an hour, more secure hours and can win better more dignified working conditions.

What would £10 an hour mean for your life?
